Minden rec committee's donation request denied

Snowdon refuses to help relieve arena deficit

by Susan Grober

Snowdon council holds fast on its decision not to donate toward the Minden Community Centre's $70,000 deficit.

This year, donation requests were sent out to each township which has residents who use the arena.

"Notwithstanding the (deficit), the municipality is in the process of expanding the community centre/arena to accommodate children's groups, bingo players, dances, etc., which will provide a wider scope of usage for ourselves and outlying townships," reads the letter sent to the townships.

Somerville, which has three residents in figure skating and nine in minor hockey, donated $450; Lutterworth donated $50 for each resident involved, at a total of $1,100; and Stanhope donated $500.

However, Snowdon councillors refused to budget

any money toward the drive.

Minden Recreation Committee members Bob Sisson and Kim Colliss attended last Monday's council meeting to ask that the township reconsider its decision.

Councillor Ron Burk said the arena should be self-sufficient.

"If Minden Minor Hockey can't pay for it, then you should up the rates," said Burk.

"It's not a big deal for the taxpayers, but if they (minor hockey) should run it on their own. Why can't they run it on a user-fee basis?"

Reeve George Simmons agreed. "If minor hockey can't support its own system, then to me it's not worth having..."

"You're in the red. Granted, you've got a problem. But I say you're going the wrong way about it... You're killing the hand that's feeding you."

Colliss stressed to council that the donation would go toward general operating costs of the arena, not minor hockey. He also said the minor hockey fee will double next year.

But Simmons maintained that Snowdon had to deal with a tight budget this year, and "to me, recreation was one area that had to be slashed."

Other areas of the township's budget, such as fire protection and waste management, were far more important than recreation, said Simmons. "If we had any more money in the pot, it would be different. But the pot is getting thin."

Sisson, who is also a Minden councillor, said the cost of maintaining ice at the arena is quite steep. "It's just too much money. Without the surrounding township's help, there's no way of going on."

"Recreation now is becoming big dollars," said

Simmons. "Everyone is hitting a bad time now, dollars and cents-wise."

"Times are getting worse, there's no doubt about it," agreed Sisson, who added that the county can't afford to run three arenas. "The ideal thing would be to have one county arena."

Sisson also asked if the township could apply for government grants to help pay for its residents' use of the arena.

Clerk-Treasurer said

most new recreation grants require long-term planning, "so we're not privy to that."

Council voted to defer a decision on the donation request, pending a review of the Snowdon recreation program.

Tire restrictions jeopardize future of Enduro bike race

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Minden may lose the Rockcliffe Enduro 100 motorcycle race because of the charges laid by OPP officers during this year's events.

During the course of the race, OPP officers from the Minden detachment issued 18 charges under the Highway Traffic Act, for motorcycles with tires which were not legal for use on roads.

At last Monday's Business Improvement Area (BIA), Harry Pye, owner of the Rockcliffe Snackbar, told the members that less than 40 of the 130 competitors finished the race and many said they would not return to Minden next year.

"It ruined the event," said Pye. "It will be difficult to entice most of the riders back."

Pye said the race regulations specify that motorcycles must be legal with the appropriate licenses, insurance, lights and horn. The problem is that Ministry of Transportation regulations regarding tires make it difficult for enduro races to operate legally.

"The only charges were for the tires," said Pye. "It would ruin the sport in Canada if we had to follow the letter of the law."

Pye said the OPP were contacted, by letter and phone, a month before the race and invited to come check out the motorcycles at the start.

An hour before the race began, an OPP officer came to the starting area where riders were preparing for the Enduro and said many of the tires were not legal.

Race organizers suggested that police pick a spot along the race course to scrutinize the bikes. Pye said the bikes are required to pass through about nine check points during the event, and by the second check point riders were being ticketed.

"It is, in my opinion, an over-reaction on the part of the police," said Pye. "If we don't have at least some sort of mellowing, we won't have the event next year. They should have used more discretion." (more on page 2)

Police window smashed

A Toronto man was charged with mischief after a window of the new community policing office was broken on Friday night.

Chris Omelon, 19, was apprehended by police after a number of local youths heard the pane of glass break. They assisted the police in identifying the culprit.

Police said Omelon was unaware the building was an office for the community policing officer. Constables Mark McMaster and Mike Landry are handling the investigation.

Battling a blaze

Lightning hit the old Clare Walker farmhouse during last Friday's electrical storm, starting a fire which eventually gutted the 130-year-old structure, located in Lutterworth Township off of Lutterworth Boundary Road. According to Minden Fire Chief Don Booth, the house may have been hit a little after 4 p.m., but the fire department wasn't alerted until just before 5:30. Sixteen firefighters tackled the blaze for about six hours, and were able to salvage some items from the house, owned by Joan and Wally Bunn. Unfortunately, a number of antiques on the second floor were ruined. Booth estimates damages at $40,000.

Enduro brings business

cretion."

The loss of the event would have an adverse affect on the locally economy, said Pye. Each of the participants spends at least $100 locally, and the race brings hundreds of people to the area.

Because so many of the racers dropped out of the race early this year, Pye said some local motels lost up to 14 bookings for Saturday night.

BIA members said they would like to know why charges were laid this year when the event has been held in Minden for four previous years with no problem and why similar races are held in other parts of the province without police interference.

Pye said race organizers are writing a letter to OPP district headquarters in Peterborough expressing their concerns.

Council denies Cairn demonstration ban

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

A request by the Haliburton Legion to have demonstrations banned at the County Cairn has been denied by Minden Council.

Earlier this year, Legion members met with council and expressed concern about demonstrations being held at the Cairn, which is located at the Minden Cultural Centre.

Because the Cairn is located on public property and fronts on to a municipal parking lot, council said it could not stop people from gathering at the site. Councilors suggested that the Legion investigate the possibility of either erecting a fence around the Cairn or moving it to another location.

At last Thursday's meeting, councillors discussed a letter from Mabel Brannigan, past president of Branch 129 in Haliburton, in which she requested that council ban future demonstrations within a given distance from the Cairn.

The Legion became concerned after the cairn was the site of a peace rally last year organized to protest Canada's involvement in the Gulf War, which was attended by Victoria-Haliburton MPP Dennis Drainville and representatives from local peace groups.

"As I mentioned at the council meeting, following similar demonstrations several councils across Canada have acknowledged the sacrifice made by World War I and World War II Canadians whose names appear on cenotaphs and cairns by passing such a resolution," said Brannigan in her letter.

However council denied the request for the ban, saying they could not prevent people from gathering on public property.

"Since we are in Canada, and Canada is a free country, I don't feel we can put restrictions on a piece of property owned by the municipality," said Councillor Verne Graham.

Head Lake slips request

by Susan Grober

Dysart council will look into a suggestion to place docking slips for boats at Head Lake Park.

At last Monday's council meeting, a local dry land marina operator asked if the municipality could put docking slips at Head Lake, near where the caboose is situated.

"Too many people leave their boats at the government dock," says Reeve Bill Davis, "so he would like us to get involved with the slips."

Davis says council reacted favorably to the overall idea, but not to the man's other suggestion that the municipality could rent out the slips.

Council asked its BIA (Business Improvement Area) representative, Bob Nichol, to discuss the feasibility of the project with the area's business owners.

"We would like to enhance the Parks Canada facility that's there now," said Davis.

Group proposes an 'Assembly of Electors'

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

A new form of grassroots democracy is emerging in Victoria-Haliburton.

A group of citizens in the riding is planning to form a 60-member Assembly of Electors, which will study proposed federal legislation and direct the Member of Parliament on how to best represent the wishes of his constituents.

Monroe Scott, one of the organizers, says members of the Assembly will be elected to a three-year term from wards which are being set around the riding. Each ward will have about 1,000 residents.

The primary duty of the Assembly will be to "select for scrutiny certain federal legislation that has been introduced but not yet passed, to assess the legislation on its merit, avoiding confrontational partisanship and seeking consensus, and to report the Assembly's conclusions to the general public, the media and the riding MP," according to a written proposal.

If the MP consistently ignores the wishes of the Assembly during debates and votes in the House of Commons, the Assembly members will "actively encourage the electorate to look elsewhere for representation" at election time.

Scott says that although the formation of the Assembly may appear to be antagonistic to the local MP, that doesn't have to be the case.

"An MP may very much want to represent the people, but he will have quite a problem with his own party if he doesn't toe the line in Ottawa," he says. "It would be very interesting for an MP to stand up and say he'd like to support the party, but the Assembly in his riding doesn't agree and he can't go against them. It's a fairly potent weapon, if you stop to think about it."

The proposal for the Assembly of Electors was born out of a growing sense that politicians are more responsible to their parties than they are to the people they were elected to represent, says Scott.

"Power has been going upwards and is very much in the hands of a political elite which is under pressure from interest groups and corporations. The people in government are there because the electorate put them there and the real power is still with the electorate. It can be a very healthy reminder."

A steering committee has been formed to organize the wards, recruit interested people and plan for the election of assembly members. Despite the amount of planning required, Scott says it's possible elections could be held late this fall.

Scott says that, as far as organizers know, the proposed Assembly is the first of its kind in Canada. "It's a pilot project. I think that's worth emphasizing," he says. "We don't know how it will work." If the Assembly is successful, Scott says the idea may catch on in other ridings.

The proposal for the Assembly is the direct result of a Citizens' Forum meeting which was held in Lindsay to provide input to the Spicer Commission on Canada's future. After the meeting, some of the participants formed an informal "Citizens' Open Circle" which has continued to meet on a regular basis to discuss current issues.

At one of the meetings of the Citizens' Open Circle, Prof. Vaughan Lyon, of Trent University's political science department, presented his idea for a Community Parliament upon which the Assembly of Electors is based.

Victoria-Haliburton MP Bill Scott, a member of the Conservative government, as been sent a copy of the proposal for the Assembly of Electors but has not been contacted by the steering committee.

One of the strengths of the proposed assembly is the fact that it is completely community-driven and does not require the approval of any government, says Monroe Scott.

"We don't need the authority from anyone. If folks want to do it, they do it."

New office building proposed for Haliburton

by Susan Grober

Dysart council is considering a proposal to erect a two-storey office building in Haliburton Village.

Steve Bowskill plans to construct the 55 by 35 foot building next to the existing social services building, near the Skyslider.

Bowskill said the grassy area in front of the Skyslider would be paved, as far southwest as the ball diamond, to allow for the Ministry of Transportation's minimum of 32 parking spaces.

"There's no reason not to pave, because people don't sit there," he said.

In between the two office buildings, Bowskill proposes a grassy courtyard area "where people could just go and sit and eat lunch on a nice day."

The building itself would have five offices, conference space, an observation area, and a play area.

Bowskill said the building would create five new jobs in Haliburton. "We have an opportunity to supply additional space for social services."

One problem, however, is that the structure would take up seven feet on the road allowance.

Reeve Bill Davis asked Bowskill whether he knows if there is sewage capacity for the building.

"We have an existing line," said Bowskill. "These are not buildings with showers, and people doing laundry and dishes. These are office spaces."

Planning Administrator Jody Ainsworth said any requirements would be dictated through a site plan agreement.

Councillor Murray Fearrey said he'd like to look at the site again, as well as determine whether there is sewage capacity.

Davis said the parking area needs more attention. "I'm concerned about how close it gets to the ball diamond. We don't want any broken windows."

Environment, election top Mountain Lake list

by Susan Wilson

Elections and the environment were at the top of the agenda for the standing-room only crowd at the Mountain Lake Property Owners' Association meeting on Saturday, July 6. President Bob Hurrle reported that the preceding year had been an interesting one, particularly with the creation of the Coalition of Anson, Hindon, and Minden Ratepayers Associations (CAHMRA).

Hurrle noted that the tax system is "bordering on out of control", citing the recent development in Victoria County of a formal revolt against present tax structures and the work done locally by Gary Kenney and John Beachli to develop group action on tax increases at the county level.

Hurrle introduced Jean Anthon and Grant Plouard, the two candidates declared so far for the Anson, Hindon, and Minden municipal elections next November 12th. These two candidates have been endorsed by CAHMRA, based on the opinion that they have sympathy with the concerns of the municipality's ratepayers.

Hurrle noted that nominations for the election close October 12th. Advance polls will be held Saturday, November 2nd, and Wednesday, November 6th. He explained some of the rules around proxies. A person holding proxies can vote for any number of direct relatives (a term that has a very strict definition under the Election Act) and can also vote for neighbours who may be unable to attend any of the polls. However, the proper forms have to be used. The association will endeavour to provide proxy forms to anyone who wants them.

Hurrle also mentioned the practice of "plunking". "There are five seats on council," he explained, "but you don't have to vote for all of them. If you don't know anybody running for a particular seat, you don't have to cast a vote for that seat. If you only want to mark one person's name, then mark just that one. Vote for the people whose positions you know and approve of."

Concern was also expressed about the current council's handling of the approval for the cellular telephone tower at the foot of Twelve Mile Lake. It was reported that, although the law requires that local councils be given a year's notice of the proposal to install such towers in order to make adequate assessments, the Anson, Hindon, and Minden Council approved this tower "in two minutes with no discussion", perhaps based on the fact that it had been approved federally. A motion was made and passed requiring the executive to investigate the procedures followed in this instance and, should findings warrant, to make a formal protest.

"Votes are no good if they're not cast," Hurrle concluded. "If we don't get involved in this election, people are going to lose their cottages to taxation and we're going to have more problems like the cellular tower."

Treasurer Jim Russell reported that the association is in a healthy financial state and that memberships are up substantially from last year. The incorporation process is now complete. A donation of $100 had been made to the Jaws for Life Fund of the Minden Fire Department which seems to have stimulated other ratepayers' associations to make donations.

Road- and cottage-numbering signs have been installed. Hurrle noted that individual property owners are going to have to take responsibility for maintenance of the signs, should they fall down or be knocked down.

He also reported that the signs had already proved their worth. The Wingers had had to call the ambulance and the attendants remarked that they had never had such simple and effective instructions.

The quality of the water in Mountain Lake remains comparable with other years, according to tests of chlorophyll levels and secchi depth. While it is not advisable to drink the water, the Ministry of the Environment pronounced the lake "in excellent shape".

Mountain Lake is also one of the better lakes as far as the annual drawdown is concerned. But Jim Russell pointed out the bottom line: "in lean years, the Trent-Severn Waterway gets the water". He announced that a Public Symposium on the issue is being organized by the Trent-Severn Reservoir Lakes Council. It will be held on Saturday, August 10th, at 1:30 p.m. at the Community Centre in Haliburton.

Mountain Lake annual meeting

Two guest speakers addressed the meeting, both from the Ministry of Natural Resources. Len Munt described the results of the spraying program to control the gypsy moth and Kim Hussey explained the new Lake Stewardship Program.

Munt reported that one side of Highway 35 north of Jordan Drive had been sprayed this spring using "BT", a naturally occurring pesticide fatal to lepidoptera. "You can see the difference in the foliage on one side of the highway versus the other," Munt said. He showed slides from other parts of the province which showed dramatically the difference in foliage in sprayed and unsprayed areas.

He also suggested that property owners could do a great deal to control the gypsy moth by collecting the chamois-coloured egg masses and drowning them in soapy water. "The females lay their eggs under rocks, in the notches of trees, under curls of bark, on your tent or your car," he explained, "and one female can produce up to a thousand offspring."

He also suggested banding trees where gypsy moth caterpillars are eating the leaves with strips of burlap. "When the caterpillars come down the tree looking for a place to sleep, they will hole up in the burlap. Next morning, you can take the burlap off the tree, drown the caterpillars, and put up more burlap."

Munt explained that it is not the MNR's purpose to eradicate the gypsy moth, since this is only one of several insects that cause problems for trees. Nonetheless, he invited those present to sign up for next year's spraying program and to watch the local papers for his articles and advertisements on the program.

Kim Hussey is a summer student with the MNR, hired on a 22-week contract to begin development of the Lake Stewardship Program. "The shoreline of a lake is analogous to the skin on a body," she explained. "Education is the most important tool we have to avoid the kinds of mistakes that have been made in waterfront development in the past. With the boom in waterfront residency, the stress is even greater now. This program is designed to educate the general public and especially waterfront owners about environmental protection."

The program requires the appointment of a voluntary Master Steward for each lake, someone who will undertake to become knowledgeable about that lake and be the first contact for lake residents wondering about what they are and are not allowed to do and why. "This person should be curious," Hussey said, "and should be prepared to hold the position for a number of years in order to build up the necessary body of knowledge. The MNR already has available a great deal of information amassed over decades. But this information has to be studied and assimilated to be useful."

Part of Hussey's job involves writing a chapter for the "How To" manual of the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations and she hopes eventually to produce a booklet about each lake which would be available to new owners through the realty companies. "Eventually, we hope to have each lake set its own standards for lakefront development," she said.

"The penalties for damaging fish habitat are now up to $1 million," she reminded the audience, "so it's a good idea to get a building permit before you start and follow the guidelines."

The meeting adjourned shortly after noon, with an invitation from the President for anyone interested in participating in the work of the executive to let their interest be known to him or other executive members.

The Minden Arena was filled with talent during last weekend's Highlands Artisans Festival. Here a man examines the paintings of Lutterworth artist Ron Murdoch. Other booths displayed a variety of works -- including crafts, folk art, sketches, and leather and knit goods -- by artists from across the county and beyond. The two-day show was sponsored by the Agnes Jamieson Gallery, to celebrate its 10th anniversary. And it certainly proved to be a success, for artists and buyers alike.

Second bridge on hold

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Minden council has opted out of a transportation study which would have determined if the village needs a second bridge across the Gull River.

At last Thursday's meeting, the councillors decided the study, which would have cost the municipality about $8,000, would not provide any useful information.

The total cost of the study was estimated at $30,000, but the Ministry of Transportation was going to pick up 75 per cent.

"It appears the whole project is designed to spend provincial funds on something that might be of interest to us in the future," said Councillor Verne Graham. "There is no problem with the bridge and no problem with traffic. I can't see a new bridge being needed for a number of years."

Graham said that even if the municipality decided to go ahead with the study, another study would be needed when it came time to build the second bridge.

"Until we have some indication a bridge is needed, I don't feel we should spend money, for the sake of spending money, to prove something we already know," he said.

"I see no need for doing the study. The bridge was just a pipe dream of a former reeve of the municipality in his election campaign."

Graham was referring to former reeve Ray Moore who supported the idea of a second crossing over the Gull River to provide improved access to the village.

Councillors also expressed concern about the changing cost of the study, which went from $60,000 to $35,000, and the fact that the ministry was planning to use the study to look at access to Highway 35 from the intersection with Highway 121 south of the village to the intersection with Highway 121 north of the village.

"I didn't think I'd be defending Reeve Moore, but I've been a supporter of the second bridge," said Deputy-Reeve Mike Maher. "I'm siding with the ex-reeve and think there is a need for the bridge, but I don't have good feelings about a company saying the study will cost $60,000 then come back and say it will cost $35,000 that fast. It scares me." Maher said he was also concerned that the ministry is planning to limit access to Highway 35.

Councillor Bob Sisson said council agreed they would spend a maximum of $7,000 on the study and anything above that figure would kill it. "As far as I'm concerned, it's dead," he said. Sisson also said the access to Highway 35 which already exists might be placed in jeopardy by the study.

At last Monday's meeting of the Business Improvement Area (BIA), members agreed to donate $1,000 toward the cost of the study. The BIA approved the donation after Councillor Lewis Stevens told them a second bridge would help encourage more development on the north side of the river.

Reeve Bern Berry told council that ministry funding will still be available for the study next year if the municipality decides to proceed.

"My personal opinion is, we should shelve it," said Berry. The funding may be there in 1992, and at that time we can pursue it again. It has some good things with it, but I don't think the time is right."

Staying active

Anyone who thinks of Minden as a sleepy little town should visit the fairground just about any night of the week.

There they'll find hundreds of people of all ages watching and playing baseball. On certain nights, the youngsters take to the diamonds, (there are four now), while on other evenings there is an opportunity for adults to stay active. And while the action is taking place on the diamonds, the tennis courts are usually in constant use and the indoor lawn bowlers have attracted a crowd to the old curling club. On some evenings the arena is in use. Those who enjoy the shuffleboard courts can generally be found there in the afternoon.

Through it all, couples out for a stroll and families on bicycles thread their way around the action. Minden is an active community.

There is no doubt, the growing concern for personal fitness is providing an impetus for many to get out and be active. As well the hard work of organizers and sponsors of the various leagues should be recognized for the dedication they have shown. The improved facilities offered by the municipality, including the newest diamond, help to make it possible to stay active. This positive reaction to improved facilities should provide a message for the municipality. Perhaps it is time the recreational parks master plan for the township should be dusted off and given some serious consideration again.

In the meantime, if you find the streets a little quieter than usual these summer evenings, there's a good chance the people you're looking for are up at one of the ball diamonds staying active and encouraging others to do so too.

If there's one thing Canadians are good at, it's laughing at each other.

There are Newfie Jokes, of course. And Hogtown Jokes.

Calgarians tell jokes about Edmontonians. Oiler fans respond with knee-slappers about the flickering Flames.

Chic Montrealers snicker over Toronto Wannabes, while World-Class Torontonians chortle at Lunchbucket Hamiltonians.

But there's one Canuck joke you don't hear much any more: the Sudbury Joke. Sudbury jokes used to be a whole subspecies of humour in this country.

What do you call a guy from Sudbury? Rocky.

Sudbury: the town where you find a pretty girl behind every tree.

Sudbury jokes were based on the way that northern Ontario town used to look — which is to say, ugly. Years

Black 'n White

by Arthur Black

of industrial rapine had denuded the landscape around the town, leaving it looking like the arse end of some lifeless space asteroid. The funniest Sudbury joke was no joke at all — back in the sixties, Apollo astronauts really did go to Sudbury to get familiar with the landscape they would soon see on the moon.

I don't know where NASA astronauts train these days — the New York Bronx, maybe — but it isn't Sudbury. The city has changed. Urban cosmeticians have been busy these past couple of decades and Sudbury is almost — well, dammit — pretty.

Sudbury has a lot to work with — for starters, it's got seven, count 'em seven, freshwater lakes within the city limits. That's seven fish-bearing, swim-able lakes. Compare that with Toronto which has 13 beaches — all of them closed due to pollution each summer.

Mostly what's changed in Sudbury is that it's a heck of a lot greener than it was a couple of decades ago. What used to be stark boulders, gravel and craters is now fuzzed over with a green mantle of grasses, bush and trees.

Back in the late '70's, Sudbury city fathers realized that unless they wanted to go into the Guinness Book of Records as the largest urban slag heap in the world, they were going to have to do something about Sudbury's Noriega-like complexion. So they started hauling in topsoil and throwing seeds around. So far they've spent about $14 million and reclaimed some 1500 acres of scrubland (more on page 7)

Tax watch column distorts the facts

Editor:

Messrs. Kenney and Beachli of Community Tax Watch are entitled to their opinions and to believe that the County's Department of Planning and Economic Development should be disbanded. However, to blatantly distort facts to achieve their aims is a process that cannot be condoned or accepted. The following corrections to some of the errors which have been published over the past several weeks are provided.

1. Cost to taxpayers of planning and economic development.

Messrs. Kenney and Beachli first suggested that the cost to each taxpayer would be Planning - $17 and Economic Development - $11 for a total of $28. The following week after being advised of their error they acknowledged same in their next column and suggested the amount would be half of what they had previously reported which would mean $14 per taxpayer. This was not accurate either. In fact if a taxpayer is paying $600 in property taxes, County planning and economic development is costing them approximately $3.50 in 1991.

2. 1990 County revenue estimates

The County had hoped to receive a grant of $44,000 last year (1990) from the Ministry of Industry, Trade & Technology for Economic Development purposes. However, the grant was not approved until 1991 in the amount of $75,000. In 1990 the first priority was to begin our County Official Plan process which is a County cost. Planning grants, when approved and received are for expenses related to the extra costs (i.e. Consultant fees) of preparing for the Official Plan. There was no slip of $100,000 as reported by Messrs.

Kenney and Beachli.

3. Economic Development Officer role

Messrs. Kenney and Beachli in their latest release state "the County Economic Development Officer justifies his new job by deriding local businesses in a news release..." A recent release of the Economic Development Task Force states that "the community based economic development process is not 'solely concerned' with private enterprise development which is mainly guided by maximizing profit to the individual".

The Task Force went on to say that "the major emphasis (of community based economic development) is on the betterment of the community at large". In saying that the County approach (community based) includes more than just only private business people in no way can be taken to say they are being "derided". This abuse by Community Tax Watch to attempt to disrupt the County's relationship with its business community is beyond comprehension.

Honest comment based on facts is a keystone of our democratic process. Manipulation and publication of disinformation to create friction between County Council, their employees and the County taxpayers is a disservice to all.

Carol Puffer,
Warden.

Too much government

If you want a sample of too much government, and the expense that goes with it, Ontario's newest County provides too clear an example. No less than 11 councils look after the needs of Haliburton County's 17,000 permanent and 30,000 seasonal residents.

The extra unnecessary expense is hitting home today in the midst of a recession that threatens to extend its local devastation into mid-1992. Our newest layer of government fatty tissue, the Planning/Development Department, is a terrible reminder of how much easier it is to throw tax dollars at issues rather than think them out first.

Ten years ago there began an important discovery of the need to look ahead using the tools associated with Official Plans. Three of our ten municipalities forged ahead with this expensive but valuable concept. The rest balked. Those that spent the time and money were hopeful that after all townships had completed the task an overall County Official Plan could pull the nine separate Plans together.

Today we still have only three municipal Plans, but the remaining townships insist we go ahead with a County Plan even though they have yet to do their own homework. We have been told this is necessary because Ontario has 'frozen' development in the County until such a high level Plan is completed.

Community Tax Watch

by Gary Kenney and John Beachli

When we asked to see the letter from the Province that indicated this "freeze", it could not be found.

The truth is there is no such letter. The stalled County Plan is simply a way to get all taxpayers to pay for the smaller municipalities' homework. Such community sharing is not bad in itself...except for one little detail. It just so happens that this County is also applying for Provincial authorization to look at restructuring our political map by joining the townships into larger and more efficient units.

What sense does it make to pay the hundreds of thousands of tax dollars needed to keep the Planning/Development department around until the Province decides to proceed with a County Plan, when we also went to look at restructuring the County itself?

No proof of wrong-doing during Minden raft race

Editor:

The letter in last week's issue re: a "new low for Minden" requires a factual response to Mrs. Howell.

From her letter it now appears the boys are the ones who should have been disqualified. What was a 13-year-old doing on a raft without an adult when all advertised and published rules clearly states anyone under the age of 14 must be accompanied by an adult? This, I believe, is not a good parental example, nor is it fair to the organizers to encourage willful deception.

All entries except the complainants entry had registered by June 26, the advertised deadline. The entry in question showed up at the starting line expecting to be entered.

Mrs. Howell's complaint was not overlooked as she claims and when she was told it would be investigated, she became even more vocal and abrasive. She then left without confronting the alleged "offenders" in our presence. We checked with our spotters along the riverbank and tried extensively to establish if anything resembling the complaint had occurred and we could not. At no time were the "damaged" inner tubes produced to substantiate the claim.

Because there was no positive proof of wrong-doing, third prize money from B.I.A. funds was awarded to the group who finished third. The money given to the boys was a private donation given for compassionate reasons by the donor. That now appears to have been an error in judgement.

Hopefully, this ends this whole disgusting affair.

Firefighters take risks

Editor:

On Friday, July 5th, I had occasion to watch our volunteer firefighters in action. It is not like watching 911 on TV, I was very nervous watching these young people, that I have known for years, taking risks for us. I was impressed with their quick response and by their professional manner. They were efficient and well organized. It was evident that hours of volunteer time had gone into their training.

We should never take these fine young people for granted. We must let them know that we appreciate them. Mindenites, we are indeed fortunate to have a quality volunteer fire department.

Firefighters, I was impressed and proud of you. Thank you!

and hardpan. In the past fifteen years they've planted well over a million trees.

What's particularly ironic is where nearly half of those seedlings began life.

Three-quarters of a mile underground. In a mine-shaft. Creighton No. 9 shaft, to be precise. The seedlings were germinated last January, coddled under 1,000 watt metal halide lights for the next four months and finally transplanted above ground in the late spring.

Creighton No. 9 shaft makes a great greenhouse. The temperature is a constant 75 degrees. There's plenty of surplus water and electricity from the mining operations.

And very few browsing moose or hungry budworms three-quarters of a mile down a hardrock mine.

There's an even greater irony at work here. The Creighton mine belongs to Inco.

Inco? Aren't they the folks who put up the great filthy smokestack Americans claim is the biggest single source of sulphur dioxide pollution on the continent?

Yup. And Creighton No. 9 is part of a nickel mine that helped to give Sudbury its Hobs of Hell reputation years ago.

Last year, this mine shaft contributed 55,000 jack and red pine seedlings to the beautification of Sudbury.

Looks like Creighton No. 9 — and Inco — are starting to pay their civic dues.

Looks like Sudbury isn't Moon Country anymore. Looks like the Sudbury Joke is on the rest of us.

On smoking, environment, and separatism

Editor:

This letter covers a few brief comments on stories that have appeared in The Times over the last few months.

Cigarettes: smoking is a sickness. Raising taxes to an all-time high is ridiculous. The never-smoked, non-smoker does not know the difference, and I congratulate them for not starting, as well as those who have quit.

A chronic smoker who doesn't have any cigarettes will drive around all night looking for a cigarette machine that works, or dig through ash trays looking for the longest butt. They will be cold, irrational, almost violent until they get their next fix. They will lie, cheat, steal, buy black market cigarettes, and smuggle to avoid the high prices.

Cigarettes should be free, then children would see that they're bad. Something that is so expensive can't be all that bad. eg: gold, silver, cigarettes.

Next time you see that smoker, don't curse him, have sympathy for your fellow person and be prepared to pick up the tax.

Raising prices is not the cure for this sickness it only impoverishes the people around the smoker as more is spent to support the addiction.

Only support and kindness will help them quit. Oh yes, no cost, no crime or black market cigarettes.

Alcoholism was widespread during prohibition, so was corruption.

Environment: It is a concern for everyone, but where will it start and end?

Will we stop cutting live trees and burn dead dry ones which don't produce oxygen. Burning also stops them from producing methane.

Sending children to school in shifts could be the answer to the cry for more schools. We have to heat the buildings 24 hours a day anyway.

Teachers taking the school bus along with the children could provide better supervision along with conservation of resources and less pollution.

Everyone should have the same sized economical car with interchangeable parts from year to year. No motor sports; no boating; no snowmobiling; no ATVs; no racing.

Bare minimum housing with exact square footage per person would help, along with no extravagances to help eliminate excess heating costs.

All bottles and jars should be made the same size for wise shipping, all deposit refundable, all reuseable and of a sensible weight.

Yes, a million and one solutions, but the whole thing could end up horse and buggy or are we interfering with the course of nature and our own existence.

Quebec separating: In my opinion someone trying to do this is a traitor who is hiding in the guise of a political leader. No bill or law is going to keep someone's heritage secure. I was born a Canadian and my family heritage was taught to me by my mother and father, of whom I am very proud. Whatever happened to the word 'confederation'? I don't want another Meech Lake Accord, I just want a whole Canada. Please leave well enough alone.

I am tired of being over-taxed and torn apart.

Drug store's decision to sell cigarettes puzzles reader

Editor:

I read an article in the Toronto Star recently which reported that the State of Iowa has declared it illegal for anyone under 18 years of age to use or have cigarettes or tobacco products in their possession. In fact, the article claimed that by 1994, all cigarette vending machines would be supervised by an adult to ensure that children under 18 years could not have access.

I visited my local drug store and discovered that a decision had been made to sell cigarettes. This decision reversed an earlier decision made not to sell cigarettes. Medications are dispensed at the rear of the pharmacy for cancer treatment, the major cause of, and contributor to, the disease is sold at the front of the store. Oh, also, our children in Haliburton have been given a safe place to smoke at school too!

Makes you wonder, doesn't it?

Teen hotel is now closed

Editor:

Please help me spread the word!

Attention parents: If your child is planning a trip to the teen get-away haven located at # 29-5935 63 St., Red Deer, Alberta, please note THE DOORS ARE CLOSED!

I being a struggling single mom, buying a house with the help of my 18-year-old son, Rob, and (I know most of these parents on a personal basis).

I'm finding things difficult because of a steady stream of teens arriving here from Minden and Haliburton since last November.

I have opened my home up to these people, providing them with winter clothing (never to receive them back, or cash to replace), feeding them, providing ride to Calgary, etc.

My beef is, not once have I received a call to see if this is all right, can I pay for some of the expense, or even a thanks for having my child in your home.

To date, there have been a total of three boys and two (more on page 16)

Not all race entrants accountable for mishap

Editor:

I am writing in response to a letter published in The Times on July 8, 1991, in regards to the Gull River Raft Race. The letter referred to an incident which both disturbed myself and the staff members who were involved in entering a raft in the race.

An incident such as this is both unfortunate and uncal-led for but I feel that not all entrants who were there in fun and in fair play should be held accountable. Many entrants spent a great deal of time, effort and spirit in entering the race. We hope that a situation such as that will never arise again.

Break-ins dominate local court trials; 21-year-old goes to jail

The following cases were heard last Wednesday by Judge George Inrig in provincial court in Minden. Rick Bagg acted as Crown Attorney.

Four months in jail for break-ins

A 21-year-old man described as 'a good kid who got involved with bad company' was sentenced to four months in jail for breaking into 11 Glamorgan cottages last fall.

Gregory W. Riel pleaded guilty to breaking into the cottages between September 17 and October 8, 1990. A total of $350 must be paid in restitution for damages occurring during the break-ins, and for alcohol which was stolen and consumed by Riel and two other co-accused.

Other stolen items include a VCR, a compact disc player, a six channel audio mixer, a .22 calibre rifle, binoculars and a colour television set.

Crown Attorney Rick Bagg said cottage break-ins are a problem in the area, and a jail sentence would be necessary to act as a deterrent, even though Riel's pre-sentence report "is really quite favorable."

Defence lawyer Brad Johnston asked for a suspended sentence, probation, and an order for community service work.

He described Riel as a young man who never before caused problems in his community or at home, and who has been consistent with his good character. He also said Riel doesn't abuse alcohol or use drugs.

Judge George Inrig said that, before sentencing Riel, he had to weigh the nature of the offences with Riel's character and reasons for committing the offences.

He said the pre-sentence report includes comments from Riel's employer, who speaks highly of the accused, and that Riel has no previous criminal record.

"It seems he isn't a bad kid, he just got in with bad company."

However, Judge Inrig opted for a jail sentence because he felt cottage break-ins are a problem that must be avoided.

He sentenced Riel to 30 months in jail, consecutive on each of three counts of break, enter and theft, and one count of break, enter with the intent to commit an indictable offence.

For the seven other break-ins, the judge suspended sentence, and placed Riel on three years of probation, during which time he must not consume alcohol.

Thieves take tools, equipment

A local man pleaded guilty to two charges of break, enter and theft of $8,565 worth of tools and equipment in Haliburton Village.

On May 22, Robert Roberge, of Haliburton, and another man entered through an unlocked gate off Pine Street and stole $1,500 worth of privately-owned carpentry tools from a truck; a portable radio transmitter, chainsaw, three horsepower outboard motor and other items from an Emmerson Lumber warehouse; and an air compressor, outboard motor, and other tools from a shed owned by Murray Burton.

In the courts

Some of the property has since been recovered, court was told.

The matter was adjourned to September 25 for sentencing, and a pre-sentence report was ordered.

Bill Salverda, of Haliburton, will appear in Minden court on July 24 to be arraigned on charges for the same incident.

Guilty pleas to Lutterworth-Laxton crime spree

There was a postponement in the sentencing of men charged in relation to a spree of cottage break-ins and thefts in Lutterworth and Laxton townships last December.

Christopher S. Salsman, 23, and Sacha D. Levant, 21, both of Port Perry, and John R. Sturman, 22, of Oshawa, each pleaded guilty to a number of charges of break, enter and theft, and break and enter with the intent to commit an indictable offence, for incidents which occurred on or about December 5, 1990.

Salsman, Levant, Sturman and two others were involved in twelve cottage break-ins in Lutterworth township, where items such as colour television sets, VCRs, microwave ovens, furniture, tapes, a cassette deck and a barbecue were stolen.

Court was told that Salsman, Levant and another man actually broke into the cottages, while Sturman and a woman acted as look-outs.

On December 6, two Minden OPP constables investigated the incident, and found vehicle marks leading to a ditch where many of the items were recovered.

On a separate occasion, Salsman and Levant broke into four cottages in Laxton township, and stole a VCR, remote control, and numerous bottles of liquor from one of the cottages.

The two men attended at the Cobocokk OPP detachment on December 9, where they turned themselves in and arranged to return the stolen items.

A pre-sentence report was ordered. The men return to court for sentencing on September 25.

Police investigate Dysart crime spree

OPP have one man in custody following a series of break-ins in Haliburton Village last week.

On Sunday, July 7, thieves broke into Dr. Good's office, the Dysart Library, Emmerson Lumber, Haliburton Construction Warehouse, the Dysart municipal office and Waterskis Etc.

On Tuesday, Emmerson Lumber and Haliburton Construction Warehouse were broken into again and Village Court Pharmacy was also hit.

Stolen items included cash, drugs, tools, clothing and sporting goods.

Police have charged Jeffrey Emmerson, 21, of Haliburton Village with one count of break, enter and theft in connection with the break-in at the Village Court Pharmacy. Emmerson was being held in Lindsay Jail and was scheduled to appeal at a bail hearing last Thursday.

The investigation into the break-ins is continuing.

Market Value Reassessment heats up Boshkung meeting

by Carol Moffatt

The Boshkung Lake Property Owner's Association has asked Stanhope council to set up a meeting between a provincial commissioner and the taxpayers of the township to discuss Market Value Assessment.

In what became a heated meeting last Saturday, council members in attendance listened as members of the association expressed anger and concern for what will inevitably be an increase in taxes for most property owners.

Market Value Assessment is an Ontario Revenue Department initiative which calculates property taxes based on the market value of each property multiplied by a set mill rate, not on the factoring system which currently exists. Lakefront property, especially on Boshkung Lake - which Gerald Bain said was the most expensive lake in Stanhope - will, understandably, have taxes raised.

On the other hand, people who don't live on lakefront property will have their land assessed at a lower rate because it is less desirable. Taxes for such land will most likely decrease.

Under MVA approximately 1200 Stanhope properties will have taxes increased and approximately 900 will have taxes lowered.

Council unanimously voted MVA down in February, but Reeve Harry Davis said the province can force councils to adopt it even if it is voted down again. About 900 municipalities in Ontario have already adopted Market Value Assessment.

"It's a really contentious issue with everyone. I'm a taxpayer too - and on a fixed income," said Reeve Harry Davis, who suggested the meeting with a commissioner in the first place.

"I think the best thing to do is to push for a general public meeting to ask the commissioner every question we can think of about MVA," said Davis, adding he didn't feel he could answer most of the questions association members had because he has so many questions himself.

A motion was put to the floor, amended several times, discussed at length and finally voted on.

One member generated laughter and cheers when he stood and said he felt that if he can't sell his property because his taxes are so high, his property has no value and his taxes should then be zero.

Another member said he felt the whole thing was a tax grab, adding that he feels he receives no services for the taxes he pays now. Most in attendance agreed.

Reeve Davis said the entire township has already been re-assessed by regional assessors, prompting several people to enquire what their properties had been assessed at.

Gerald Bain said an appeal process exists, but property owners are not allowed to know the value placed on their properties until after MVA is adopted by local council.

Association President Frank Gump had to call the meeting to order several times.

The original motion to have a meeting with all the Reeves of the county was amended when the association realized organizing such a meeting was next to impossible.

It was then agreed to arrange the meeting to include permanent and seasonal taxpayers of Stanhope. It was suggested the meeting take place on a weekend, before Labour Day.

Council reaction to the proposal was mixed. Councillor Murray Daniels was the only dissenter in the vote on the motion.

"What you're going to get out of this meeting is zilch, as far as I'm concerned," he said.

MTO approves $20,000 grant for Stanhope Airport improvements

The following briefs are items discussed at the Stanhope council meeting on July 10.

Arrive Alive

The Haliburton chapter of Ontario Students Against Impaired Driving campaign is getting a boost after council agreed to lend the group a township-owned trailer for three dates during the summer.

The group noticed the unused construction trailer last weekend at the Stanhope Fire-fighter's Auction where the OSAID booth was set up. They asked to borrow it for three nights in July and August for similar booths from which they sell bumper stickers and promote safe driving.

Council agreed to help the campaign out as long as the chapter provided its own insurance and arranged for a responsible driver with an appropriate vehicle.

Fly-away

The Ministry of Transportation has approved a 1991 maintenance grant for the airport. A letter read aloud to council announced a subsidy of up to $20,000 for maintenance and any minor improvements that are needed.

Council approved a request from airport

Manager Mike Carey that Stanhope host the annual Oshawa Flying Club Fly-Away to take place later this year.

Carey explained that each year the Oshawa club chooses another club to visit over the course of a weekend to meet other pilots and explore other airports.

Carey said the Oshawa members will camp on the airport grounds where water and toilet facilities already exist. The two clubs will "do what pilots do", including flying skill contests, and probably a bonfire, music and games such as tug of war, said Carey.

Council agreed it was a positive way to generate publicity and activity at the airport.

Bridge talk

Stanhope could be the first township in Haliburton County to have a covered bridge.

In a letter to council, Northern Timberhouse owner Alfredo Rico stated he read about the proposed bridge at St. Peter's and suggested a covered bridge built by his company be considered.

Gerald Bain said he had spoken to the Ministry of Transport about the idea and was told such structures are subsidized up to the covering, meaning Stanhope would have to find its own money for the actual cover.

Council was enthusiastic about the idea, agreeing such a bridge would not only be a drawing card for tourists but would also slow traffic down at the junction of St. Peter's Rd. and the North Shore Rd., a junction over which council has expressed concern.

Deputy Reeve Ann Barker suggested fundraising events be considered to collect the money for the cover.

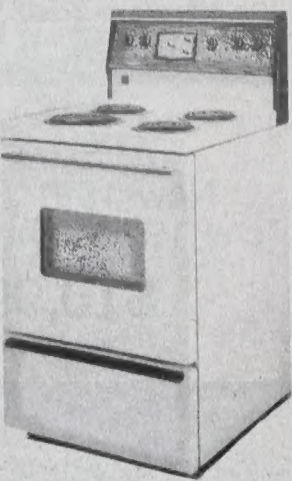

"Let's ask the engineers to consider what's involved - why not be different," said Reeve Harry Davis.

Rock band takes audience back in Tyme

What does a school teacher, an electrician, a homemaker, a maintenance worker, and a hearing instrument practitioner have in common...?

Well, on weekends they all put aside the tools of their trades, pick up their musical instruments, step back in time to their youth in the sixties... and play good 'tyme' rock'n'roll.

Mike and Brenda O'Toole, Karen Davey, Terry Benstead and Gord Kidd get together to enjoy their long-time friendships and share their talent and enthusiasm in a band called Tyme.

The members of Tyme are no strangers to music, or performing.

Individual members have played literally all over the world, from Japan to Iceland, from Norway to Germany.

During a European tour, Gord Kidd co-wrote and produced his first album and single while a member of the Icelandic rock group Geysir.

On his return from Europe, he met his childhood friend and co-rocker Mike O'Toole. Within two years, they were writing and performing together again. Soon after, they formed a band called Massebah, which produced a self-titled album.

Today the group performs for pure enjoyment, and enjoys the opportunity of assisting in worthwhile projects like the HAVE concerns in Haliburton, and the Surf Shack, a youth centre where they will be playing on August 1, also in Haliburton.

The band will also play at the Minden Rotary Summer Carnival.

A blast from the past

Gord Kidd displays albums he has performed on by the bands Geysir and Massebah. The hearing instrument practitioner's latest musical gig is a sixties-type rock and roll band called Tyme, which will perform at the Minden Rotary Summer Carnival on Wednesday, July 31.

Jug City soccer team beats Muskoka 6-1

by Jim Milne

Westside Jug City defeated Muskoka Inter 6-1 in Muskoka District soccer play last Sunday, July 7.

The City team scored three quick goals in the first ten minutes and coasted to victory against an older Muskoka team. The City keeper, Brian Moore, was disappointed by the only goal Muskoka scored because he hopes to retain his record, won last year, for the best goals against average. Currently he has a fine record of 6 goals against in seven games. He credits the team's defensive formation with four fullbacks and particularly the regular fullbacks Eoin Ross, Chris Holliday-Rhodes and Kevin Sicard.

As noted, the team

lines up in a defensive formation but the six man attacking unit has scored an impressive 27 goals in eight games. There are some weak teams in the league, such as Muskoka Inter, but the team doesn't run up the score against half.

The key to Jug City's offensive success is the speed of their forwards Jan Haedicke with seven goals, Cecil Smith with five and Tim Davies with three. City also has midfielders with good ball handling skills, Hans Walter with seven goals, Ivor Thompson with two and Marc Legere, Chris Carl, the team captain, ties the defensive and offensive units together.

On Sunday, July 14, Jug City travels to Orillia to play the only opponent to defeat them this year.

In a non league game for the Muskoka Cup on June 9, Jug City lost 2-1 but in league standings Haliburton is second with 11 points and Orillia is tied for sixth place with five points both in six games in a nine team league.

In the second half against Muskoka the team turned itself inside out. The keeper stayed put but the forwards came back to defend and the fullbacks lined up at centre. City scored once in the second

'The key to Jug City's offensive success is the speed of their forwards, and the skills of their midfielders.'

Snowdon reeve defends OP

by Susan Grober

Tighter restrictions on land use planning in the province prove that Haliburton is on the right track in establishing a county-wide official plan, says Snowdon Reeve George Simmons.

Last Monday, Snowdon council considered Municipal Affairs Minister Dave Cooke's response to reports outlining concerns over Grey County's planning approval process.

The ministry ordered Grey County to prepare a new county official plan that provides a vision and direction for growth and settlement in the county.

This decision was made after both the municipal affairs and environment ministries were approached by concerned citizens, and found that "increasingly large numbers of severances were being approved without comprehensive review and despite objections raised by residents, health units, the county planning department, and the ministries of agriculture and food, and natural resources," Cooke said in a June 3 report.

Cooke said similar measures may be taken in other areas of the province.

"We are very concerned with the impact of severances in rural, agricultural and environmentally sensitive areas, particularly when lots are created through the consent process, rather than by subdivision," he said.

"We are closely monitoring multiple lot creations elsewhere in Ontario, because we are becoming more and more concerned about the cumulative impact of this type of activity on the environment. Where our monitoring indicates a potential problem, we intend to adopt measures tailored to the specific municipality."

Simmons said the county can no longer put-off work toward establishing an official plan for the county.

"The county's been taking a lot of flak about the official plan," said Simmons. "Haliburton County avoided it in 1976, and they're going to have to start dealing with it in the year 2000."

Of the county's 10 municipalities, only three have official plans: Dysart, Minden and Cardiff. "I say Haliburton County is in trouble," said Simmons.

High taxes irk cottager

by Susan Grober

Ever-increasing taxes are "nothing short of legal robbery," says a Dysart cottager.

In a letter to council, James Martin complains that his taxes have increased an overall 49 per cent from 1989 to 1991.

This taxation system must be reviewed, as it is unfair and burdens "your most valuable asset — your summer population," states Martin's letter, discussed at last Monday's Dysart council meeting.

"Contrary to the obvious opinion of your council, we city slickers are not all big time money-makers," he wrote.

"The municipality has received a number of these letters," said Reeve Bill Davis, who chose to read Martin's letter at the meeting to use as an example.

Dysart's overall 12.25 tax increase was the combined result of the municipality's 26 per cent increase, the county's 33 per cent levy increase, and the board of education's 10 per cent levy increase.

Therefore, all complaints received regarding the tax increase are being forwarded by the municipality to the county and the board of education.

Kinmount seniors denied funds

by Susan Grober

The senior citizens' club held at the railway station building in Kinmount will have to struggle with its expenses without help from Snowdon council.

Last Monday, council declined a $700 donation request from Somerville township to help run the building.

The club has 32 members: five from Snowdon, 15 from Galway, and 12 from Somerville township.

Last year, Snowdon contributed $750 toward operating costs of the building, indicating it would be a one-time only donation.

However, a June 17 letter from Somerville council asks that Snowdon make a contribution this year "in an effort for us to be able to allow these seniors to continue using the building for their club."

Because Snowdon residents make up 16 per cent of the total club membership, (More on page 20)

Dysart hopes to crack down on noisy watercraft through bylaw

by Susan Grober

Dysart's legal authority to deal with the problem of noisy boats will be investigated.

Council considered the matter at last Monday's meeting, after receiving a letter of concern from the Miskwabi Area Cottagers' Association.

Reeve Bill Davis said although he agrees there's a problem with noisy watercraft, "I just have trouble deciding where the cut-off is."

"I'd say it's covered by the general noise bylaw," said Councillor John Parish.

"It seems to me it should be," agreed Deputy-Reeve Lloyd Leadbeater, who said the municipality could purchase a decibel meter so the bylaw enforcement officer could determine whether the offending noise is too loud or not.

He said a decibel meter is not too sophisticated, so it would be easy to use — 85 decibels is considered to be a fairly high level of noise, and 90 decibels is unacceptable at any time.

"If you know where the boat ties up, you can talk to the owner and say, 'Hey, that's not acceptable.'"

"But it's not going to stand up in court," said Davis.

Councillor Murray Fearrey suggested council should ask the municipality's lawyer for advice on the matter.

Purple Loosestrife declared a noxious weed by Minden council

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Minden council has passed a resolution declaring purple loosestrife a "noxious weed" at the request of the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters (OFAH).

In a letter to municipalities, the Federation says the loosestrife is devouring one million acres of wetlands in North America each year. Each loosestrife plant produces 2.7 million seeds and as the numbers multiply the plant pushes aside all indigenous plants vital to the habitat of fish and wildlife.

Loosestrife slowly turns wetlands into soil, drains them and leaves them useless for almost all other forms of life, according to OFAH.

The Federation has asked that municipalities pass by-laws to have the Ministry of Agriculture and Food declare the plant a noxious weed. Once the ministry has approved the by-law, municipal weed control officers can move to control the loosestrife.

Although he agreed with the by-law, Councillor Verne Graham said there is no recommended method of controlling the loosestrife. He said municipal by-laws may prove useful if they force the provincial government to adopt a policy on loosestrife control.

"It's obviously something that's well worthwhile," said Deputy-Reeve Mike Maher.

READ THEM AND REAP!

If you want to make an investment in your child's future, help him or her discover all the wonderful ways books can be an asset in everyday life.

Start by encouraging your child to read. If your school-age child asks you for the meaning or spelling of a word, show him how to find the answer in a dictionary.

When planning a family trip to a distant place, seize the opportunity to introduce the atlas or encyclopedia.

And of course, encourage your child to use reference materials when doing homework or special projects.

In fact, there are so many ways reading enriches our lives that life is an open book when you know where to look!

The plaques were presented by the events co-chairmen (front row) Andy Poldas and Corey Casey.

Somerville seniors must fend for selves after refusing legion's help

(from page 18)

Somerville calculated the donation request by determining that Snowdon should cover 16 per cent of the building's $4,385 expenses for 1990.

Snowdon Councillor Al Jopling was angered by the request. Jopling is president of the Kinmount legion, which he says has previously offered to lend the club a hand.

"That aggravates me to no end, because we gave them a place," said Jopling. "We offer them help, and they say no. They feel independent, but they're not...

"I think we should suggest to the seniors that the legion is there for them if they want it."

Council included this sentiment in its resolution declining the donation request.

Contractors form county association

A new association, the Haliburton County Home Builders Association, has been formed in an effort to raise the profile of the contractors in the county and improve the credibility of the construction industry in general.

The new organization, headed by John Robinson, of J. D. Robinson Construction, has already achieved a broad base of support across the industry and is looking to increase its membership.

The organization is associated with the Ontario Home Builders Association and its federal counter-part. Through contact with these bodies the local association will be able to provide educational programs for its members to help improve the knowledge and expertise in the building industry.

Robinson said people from outside the area are often confused or uncertain when dealing with local contractors. As a result, these people often turn to companies they are familiar with from outside the county. He pointed out that most of this work could be done by local businesses, it was simply a matter of making people comfortable when dealing with local firms.

One of the goal of the organization is to improve communications among its members. For example, he said members will be encouraged to recommend fellow contractors in the county if they are unable to take care of a request from a client. He said it made sense that a job remain with local builders rather than be lost to contractors from outside the county.

Membership in the association will be by invitation with the existing members nominating other in the field. It is hoped by following this procedure, a high standard will be maintained and membership in the association will be an indication of a reputable contractor.

At the moment the group is attempting to broaden its membership to include the sub-trades and may eventually offer associate membership to those companies not directly involved in home construction.

In addition to the president, the organization's executive includes vice president Gary Burtch, treasurer Gerry Walker and membership chairman Bob Lambe. The first formal meeting of the association is scheduled for September 11 at PineStone Inn.

Province will trade driver information

by Doreen Hawman

As of June 1, 1991, Ontario began exchanging traffic offence conviction information with Manitoba, Alberta and Newfoundland.

All provinces and territories, except for Quebec and British Columbia, have signed the Compact. B.C. is expected to sign the Compact soon and Ontario currently has a separate agreement with Quebec on the exchange of driver conviction information.

As well as the safety-related benefits of enhanced traffic law compliance, the agreement offers easy transfer of drivers licence information for people relocating to other provinces.

Driver's Handbooks and Ontario Driver's Manuals adapted for Adult Readers are available at your nearest Information Centre or any Ministry of Tourism Office.

Have you ever considered becoming a volunteer? Your skills and talent will add to the betterment of our community. For further information contact your nearest Information Centre.

Busy summer at libraries

Summer time is special at the nine branches of the Haliburton County Public Library. This summer, four special programmes have been scheduled to bring a measure of enjoyment to our library friends (and their friends). All are presented without charge, funding being provided by the Ministry of Culture & Communications through their Outreach Programme.

On Tuesday, July 30, the Bierdo Brothers will be appearing at branches in Gooderham and Stanhope. This lively, amusing musical entertainment will be a treat for the whole family and children of all ages. Song, dance, everything imaginable.

Later in the summer, the Generic Theatre will be performing "Beauty and the Beast" at branches in Dorset and Minden. The date is August 20 - another Tuesday - for a memorable presentation of a classic tale presented in song and rhyme for the pleasure of all.

Attend one programme or attend them all! More than welcome!

Watch the paper for more details as they become available. And watch for the fall schedule which will involve different shows in different places but equally memorable!

Final installment

HCDC receives funding

The Haliburton County Development Corporation has entered its final year of federal government funding support under the current program. An announcement earlier this week noted the local business development agency would receive $143,190 from the federal government under the Community Futures Program. The money will be applied to the operating costs of the agency.

According to corporation manager Andy Campbell, the money represents the final annual allotment promised by the government when the agency was established four years ago. He said he was pleased to have received the money, noting it was an indication the federal government was satisfied with the job the corporation was doing in this area.

The corporation has used the money provided by the federal government over the years to assist in financing new ventures and expansion of existing businesses in the Highlands. According to the announcement from MP Bill Scott and Employment Minister Bernard Valcourt, the corporation has helped to create or maintain 445 jobs during its four years of operation.

While the funding will secure the operation of the non-profit corporation for another year, manager Campbell said it is unclear what will happen 12 months from now. He noted the board of directors is exploring other possible sources of funding for the agency. He said there may be federal programs which the corporation can tap into to maintain its active status in the community. The money taken in by the corporation in repayments is "recycled" and used for loans for other ventures.

The manager says he expects the agency to have its future secured before the current support expires next year.

Finding time for reflection

The crowning evolutionary achievement of homo sapiens was the development of a brain complex enough to conceive a future. The ability of our early hominid ancestors to "look ahead" enabled them to develop strategies that would maximize their survival.

So it is ironic that today, with computer technology and global telecommunications and the expertise of engineers and scientists, we are no longer able to act to avoid ecological hazards that loom so clearly before us. Why?

In part it's because our political leaders can't afford the luxury of lifting their sights beyond the priorities of damage control for the latest controversy or preparation for the next election.

This limited perspective is warped even further by the fragmentation of their time from a multiplicity of demands. I have met very few politicians who have struck me as sleazy, dishonest or lazy. The vast majority are well-intentioned and hardworking men and women, but they are crippled by the overload of demands.

The June 10 issue of Maclean's Magazine featured a seven page photo story of a day in the life of Prime Minister Brian Mulroney. The pictures gave a wonderful impression of the enormous pressure under which the prime minister operates. (This applies in lesser degrees to any elected official.)

As well as the needs of family and personal life, there are supplicants who must be attended to - international leaders (U.S. President George Bush called Mulroney during the photo session), cabinet members, briefing staff, backbenchers, party members, constituents, lobbyists and just plain tourists.

Daily, Mulroney must fit in time to deal with issues ranging from global and national significance to backroom politics and public relations gladhanding.

But where are the blocks of time, long and quiet enough for serious reflection or reading and protracted discussion or debate? There is none. So I believe that Mulroney lacks any deep understanding of the dimensions and repercussions of

Reflections

by David Suzuki

the environmental crisis or the strategies that are needed to handle it, for example, not because he is stupid or blind, but simply because he has not had the time to become fully informed and to reflect on it.

It's the same with environment ministers who are dropped into their jobs and must immediately start dealing with the crises and issues left by the previous incumbent.

Parliamentary committee reports are often hundreds of pages long and can only be read in summary form. But how does one condense hundreds of pages into one or two while retaining the essentials and subtleties of the full document? Who decides what are the salient points?

There is a stunning sacrifice of information and context in executive summaries and the staff member who writes it has enormous influence. Do you really think the prime minister or his cabinet members have seriously discussed the long-term implications of the space program, foreign aid, global warming or deforestation before making major decisions that will affect us for years and cost billions?

Another impression one gains from the Maclean's story is the incredible buffers that must be placed between the prime minister and the public. He is encased within a cocoon of PR flacks and bodyguards who cut him off from ordinary people. An unexpected shouting match or carefully managed photo opportunity with the "public" is hardly a serious dialogue.

Political leaders are surrounded by sycophants who seldom dare to raise issues or report things that will be upsetting. Most people allowed within hailing range will be politician beneficiaries, fawning admirers or supplicants who curry favor.

Whatever the makeup of the crowd around him, Mulroney will not encounter a representative sample of public concerns. So our leaders don't have a chance to seriously exchange opinions with people who hold a different point of view or set of values.

At higher levels of political office, issues become extremely complex but political leaders have less serious contact and interchange with the electorate while time is so fragmented as to preclude serious reflection on facts, problems and long-term implications.

As we debate the political, social, economic and ecological future of Canada, we need more thoughtful leadership. That means doing away with perfunctory public appearances, that's what we have a Governor General for, so that our leaders have time to do what our distant hominid ancestors did - think ahead, consider the consequences of our actions, and choose from the options available.

It's no longer just an issue of politics but future survival.

Shoreline changes draws $2000 fine for destroying fisheries habitat

A Drag Lake cottager has been fined $2000 for destroying fisheries habitat. In addition to the fine, the presiding Judge also placed John Fujimagari on probation and ordered that he rehabilitate the damaged area.

Charges were laid against Fujimagari after an investigation by Conservation Officers from the Minden office of the Ministry of Natural Resources. Fujimagari is the owner of a cottage on Drag Lake in Haliburton County. The investigation found that he had arranged with a contractor to do work on Bonham's Bay of Drag Lake to create a sand beach. The beach creation involved the dredging of lake bed material and in-filling with several truckloads of sand.

The area in which the work took place was an important nursery area for perch and lake herring, as well as a feeding area for adult bass. In contrast, an assessment done by a biologist after the beach had been created, concluded that the unauthorized work had resulted in the harmful alteration of the shoreline and destroyed valuable fisheries habitat.

The work had been done in October of 1990 and at that time maximum penalties for this type of offence were $5,000.00; under amendments made in early 1991, the penalties have increased to $300,000.00. Restoration work by Fujimagari will take place before spring to stabilize the shoreline and restore the lost fisheries habitat.

In sentencing Fujimagari, Judge Morgan emphasized the harm that can be caused when one tries to change the shoreline. He felt it was regrettable that any one would want to change the shoreline.

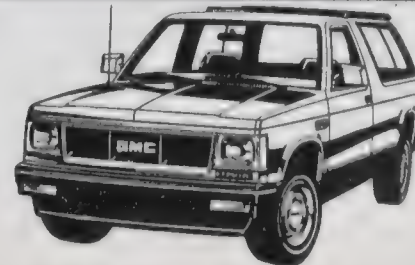

The Ministry of Natural Resources agrees that keeping shorelines as natural as possible should be everyone's goal.

Dogs and porcupines are in love

Dogs and cottages go together. At least that's how I'm trying to sell mine.

There was something satisfying about letting my dogs loose at the lake. Like I was doing them a favour. Which was repaid in blood. Fortunately not mine. Mine was the sweat, tears and muscle cramps. Theirs was the hot pursuit of a wilderness romance.

My theory is that dogs and porcupines are in love. And as fanciful as that may be, both creatures pursue it with passion. It's the stuff of great Hollywood movies.

The attraction is magnetic with Fido assertive and porky passive. And with Rover always getting the shaft, although it's usually hundreds not just one.

In fact, I have two. Dogs, that is. Babe and Cooper - female Siberian Huskies, bred for strength, endurance and supposedly some smattering of intelligence. But mine are one brick short of a load when it comes to porcupines. Not even a faint remaining flicker of instinct issues an internal warning bark.

The way it started was this: the girls were trotting along the road in front of me looking lovelorn as only a dog can. I always thought all that sniffing was to locate other dogs. Not so. They're looking for their great lost love, Mr. Porcupine.

Suddenly, there he was and the girls were off like Sidewinder missiles on a Libyan jet, despite frantic calls from me whom they are supposed to love the most. With bounding exuberance they took up the chase which wasn't very impressive since Mr. Porcupine didn't move. He'd found his long lost love too, why fight it? So he kind of hunkered down in a tight little ball to wait the courting ritual.

Babe began with a delicate sniff of Mr. Porcupine's nether end. And got the shaft(s) to the nose as Mr. Porcupine wagged his tail in greeting. The reverse wag filled her mouth.

Which cued Cooper, arriving late, but undeterred by anyone else's pain, to join the action. Mr. Porcupine was having difficulty distributing his quills evenly between his two consorts, especially since Cooper had some catching up to do. But she quickly collected more barbs than either Babe or Cupid.

Now came the part where I feel needed.

There were two dogs rolling around in agony and blood,

The Intrepid Cottager

by Craig Nicholson

trying to claw out Mr. Porcupine's departing gifts. My job was to immobilize the dogs, get help, keep calm and send Mr. Porcupine to the big tree in the sky. I tied Babe's paws together with my belt to prevent further injury and carried Cooper home bellowing for help calmly at the top of my lungs and trying to hold up my pants.

A frantic drive to the vet and $160 later, I was positive that my girls had learned their lesson. No more blind dates. They had a good teacher and I would continue to pound this lesson home.

I've had better obedience from gerbils.

Certainly I had underestimated either the power of unrequited love or the total count of our collective brain cells. Hardly had I turned my back when they were at it again - another failed romance, sharp and painful in its ending. Being short of patience and pocketbook, I decided that this affair required an object lesson.

The objects of said lesson were uncooperative, ungrateful and downright rude - caterwauling loudly, spraying blood and squirming uncontrollably. I told the wife to control herself.

As the wife went to work with scissors and pliers on Babe, I stretched out full length on top, grabbed a jaw in each hand and held that isometric embrace throughout the next three hours, except for when the wife wanted to shut her mouth for a minute. She said I was a great help but weighed too much to always be on top.

Cooper awaited her ordeal stuffed in a sack tied around her neck to keep her from clawing herself.

All in all, I would have preferred the sack. It wasn't until I tried to get out of it the next morning that I discovered the result of total body isometrics is total body cramps. The wife thought I was getting kinky again.

The dogs were so impressed by our loving care that they made a pact to avail themselves of it as often as possible. Since that first fatal liaison, there have been many others, each replete with flying fur, howling and teeth gnashing. The wife suggests that I should shut up and see the dentist. Instead, I bought three stout leashes - one per dog and one for any smart mouths. The wife says I look good in mine.

So much for dogs free in the great outdoors. I still have my theory. But now I think that dogs don't love all porcupines, just a specific one and are desperately trying to find it.

The wife's theory is stupid dogs taught by an idiot.

ARRIVE ALIVE

by Susan Grober

Two young people from Haliburton County are trying to make highway travel safer for everyone this summer.

Two local teens hope to curb the problem of impaired driving this summer.

Dorothy Sanderson and Tanya Little are organizing an Arrive Alive awareness campaign this summer, and hope to spread the word that drinking and driving don't mix.

The pair work on the project for 25 hours a week, out of the OPP's Extended Services Office, on Maple Street in Haliburton.

The students will be on-hand at an information booth at local events, such as the Haliburton Bluegrass Festival, Gooderham Horseshoe Days and Wilberforce's Country Good Times, where they are putting together a float, featuring a smashed-up car, for the parade.

Recently, they took their booth to a flea market in Stanhope, where a woman approached them saying she wished such information programs were offered in her day.

"You obviously know she's been through something," says Little, 18. "There are many people who feel for, and believe in this cause, also."

At the booth, the pair attempted to sell glasses of a non-alcoholic punch called the Arrive Alive Sunrise, consisting of cranberry and orange juices, honey, lemon juice and crushed ice.

"We tried, and nobody bought it, so eventually we started giving it away," says Sanderson, 19. "Then we started to get tons of donations. One man gave us $5, and he didn't even want any punch."

The money donated goes to Sick Children's Hospital in Toronto. Another fundraiser the women hope to organize for this cause is a car wash and barbecue in Haliburton Village.

Cars would be washed for donations, and hot dogs or hamburgers would be sold. However, for this effort, the pair needs permission, volunteers, and donations of hot dogs and condiments, as they are working with a tight budget.

During the week, much of Sanderson and Little's time is spent organizing events and reading up on the subject.

"We've been trying to get really knowledgeable about this, so when people ask questions, we can be prepared," says Little.

"A lot of people are really naive," she says. "Like, they think coffee will sober you up. It makes you wide awake, but it just makes you wide awake drunk."

Sanderson and Little have a whole bag of videos on impaired driving, and hope to do a session with participants in the summer driver's education program held at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School.

Although both had an interest in the cause before starting the project, since then each has become passionate in her stance.

"It just makes you so mad," says Sanderson, who also works at Village Donuts. "It's just the fact that it's so needless. Because all life is precious."

"It's just so thoughtless," adds Little, who says she has often acted as designated driver for her friends.

"People need to feel comfortable asking friends for a ride when they are drunk. And they need to be aware that they can't let their drunk friends drive," she says.

"If they were true friends, they would stop you," says Sanderson.

"Or call the police," says Little. "Because maybe that person won't thank you then, or maybe they'll hate you for three years. But when they are parents, they'll

Spreading the word

Tanya Little and Dorothy Sanderson have an unusual part-time job this summer, as the organizers of a local anti-impaired driving campaign. The students will be seen at many area events -- including Haliburton's Bluegrass Festival, Gooderham Horseshoe Days, and Wilberforce's Country Good Times -- over the next few months, spreading the message that drinking and driving can be a deadly combination. They also hope to run a charity car wash and barbecue.

change. They might have a record. But at least they're alive to have a record."

Little understands this feeling, because she has a child of her own. And Sanderson lost a brother in a car accident. Although an impaired driving wasn't involved, "I know how people feel when that happens," she says.

Little feels the perpetrators get-off too easy. One film she watched on the subject featured a woman killed a number of people in an accident, and only served two years after being released on probation. "Why should they put her out on the road again?" asks Little.

"I suppose it's different for the people who are really sorry for what they've done," says Sanderson.

"But sorry doesn't cut it," says Little, who believes drivers must think of the consequences before heading out in their cars while impaired. "Once there's an accident, it's too late."

As their opinions show, Sanderson and Little are very different. But they get along well, and work off each other's ideas.

"We're a good team," says Sanderson. "Tanya does the books and the organization, and I do the creative stuff."

"She's very artistic," Little says of her co-worker.

The women are working out of Haliburton's community policing office, and have been in close contact with OPP officers.

Through this contact, they will observe breathalyzer demonstrations, and eventually plan to sit in on a court trial.

And, by the end of the summer, they hope to be successful in educating the public.

"We're here, but it's uncertain whether we can make a difference or not," says Little.

"We'll never know, but at least we're trying," says Sanderson.

The project is part of the Ministry of the Attorney General's summer funding program, where 37 organizations from across the province have been awarded $140,000 to combat impaired driving in their communities.

According to the ministry, the efforts of campaigns against impaired driving have made an impact on the public.

Between 1980 and 1989, the number of alcohol-related crashes in Ontario declined by over 40 per cent. At the same time, the number of people licensed to drive increased by 26 per cent.

The students' supervisor, Wanda Mole, is also involved in the high school's OSAID (Ontario Students Against Impaired Driving) group, which was started after she applied for, and received, an $800 grant last fall.

Unfortunately, it has been difficult to garner interest for the OSAID group, which only has about six to eight members, says Mole, who is staff advisor.

"It's a hard group to get going. People that age don't want to be part of OSAID. Too many would rather be a part of the group we're trying to fight."

Mole has a personal interest in that fight, as her parents were injured by a drunk driver years ago. She understands just how serious the implications of impaired driving can be.

"They were just innocent people driving home," she says. "And they went through such trauma and tragedy. It's affected their lives forever."

Putting the three R's to work in your life

by Len Munt,
County Waste
Management
Coordinator

As of lately there has been articles (Harrowsmith Magazine), where recycling has been slammed for throwing the population off the right track of waste reduction. As you might already know, recycling is 3rd in the overall scheme of the 3 R's - Reduce, Reuse, Recycle. Although the other two are better ways of reduction in the material ending up at the landfill, recycling is playing a very, very important role in the reduction in waste making it to the landfill.

Canadians produce more garbage than any other country in the world. On average we generate approximately 620 kilograms (1364 lbs) of garbage per person each year.

As the problems with landfill sites develop it becomes important for each and everyone of us to look at what goes into our garbage. Is it really garbage or is it a valuable resource being wasted!

I would like to put forward a few illustrations to show that recycling definitely has a significant place in the waste reduction scheme. The examples should also show that recycled goods are not garbage, but a useable resource.

Len Munt, Haliburton County Waste Management Co-ordinator addresses a recent lakefront property owners association meeting about our rapidly filling landfill sites.

A can, in actuality, is a highly refined and processed piece of tin and steel. It was produced at an environmental cost - mining, energy for smelting, water for industrial processing, etc. By throwing this can into the landfill site we are not only disposing of a valuable - non-renewable resource (being the mineral), but we are also adding to the destruction of a natural environment.

Recycling plastics and aluminum, uses 90 to 95% less energy than manufacturing new plastics or smelting aluminum. There are also reduced "costs" to the environment; less water pollution, less air pollution, less scarring of the land through mining.

The Canadian Green Consumer Guide gives an excellent example of how recycling can reduce not only the amount of waste produced, but also the amount of damage to the environment caused by the manufacturing process.

If you had a cat that ate one can of food each day, over the cat's 15-year lifetime you would discard 5,475 cans (not counting leap years). If each tin weighed 40 g when empty of its contents then that would be 219 kg of steel or more than one fifth of a ton.

If we recycled we would start with one set of 10 cans, and replace them over and over again with recycled cans. Since 3% of the metal is lost during reprocessing we would have to make an extra 10 cans each year. Overall, over the cat's lifetime only 150 tins would be used and there would be 10 cans left over for the next cat. Not only would we have to reduce the amount of steel used to 6 kg, but the process used to recycling this type of material is less polluting than making new steel. Other benefits is the savings of 47-74% in energy, an 85% reduction in air pollution, a 35% reduction in water pollution and 40% savings in water use.

I would like to present some other facts as our second example of how recycling curbs the amount of waste going into the landfill.

"PET" soft drink bottles are new to the recycling scheme. They have been collected in Ontario since 1985. Since then they have reduced 3,000 tons of waste entering the waste stream each year. There are also new industry that has been sparked by recycling the "PET" bottles. From industry comes new products such as automobile bumpers, industrial filter cloth, twine, rope and carpet backing, just to name a few.

Another example may be that of recycling newsprint. Did you know that to produced one Canadian metropolitan newspaper it takes 40,000 trees a day for that newsprint. So, to recycle all the newsprint and use it, we would certainly help to protect a very valuable resource.

Just one final and quick fact. In the grocery stores across Ontario, shoppers use 55,000,000 bags a week. Please recycle the ones already at your house or buy reusable mesh bags.

We still firmly believe that the 3 R's are in the right order of REDUCE, REUSE, RECYCLE, but please do not think recycling is not doing it's part in reducing the amount of waste heading to our landfill. We must all do what we can to reduce the amount of waste going to our landfills. Every little bit helps!

MNR seeks help in protecting shorelines

by Susan Grober

The Ministry of Natural Resources would like to see municipalities pass bylaws to protect shorelines.

Three ministry representatives — Mike Belcher, Stan Flemming and Phil Raby — approached Dysart council last Monday to discuss recent restrictions against shoreline closures on lake trout lakes.

Council has previously objected to the Algonquin Region policy, established to protect fisheries.

Flemming said the ministry has been getting more strict in its guidelines for shoreline conservation, such as its requirement that a work permit is necessary for any changes done along the shoreline.

He said 397 sites have been inspected to date, and there have been more charges laid in the last two years than the last 25.

"People are becoming a lot more aware that they can't just do what they want on the shoreline," said Flemming.

Belcher said the ministry is trying to push municipalities into passing bylaws which would protect against removal of vegetation, and control the placement of buildings along shorelines.

"So if the bylaws show what you wanted, this shoreline guideline needn't be in place?" asked Councillor Murray Fearrey.

"That's right," said Belcher, adding that the ministry would like to see such restrictions included in the county-wide official plan, which is currently being drafted. "We're working with (county planner) Mark Staggs on that."

Belcher stressed that the municipality must also show its intent to enforce the bylaw.

Fearrey also asked what would happen if someone applied for a shoreline closure, and took the municipality to court for turning it down.

Belcher said the Ministry of Municipal Affairs has said it would side with the natural resources ministry if such a case were to occur.

Fearrey said the ministry's stance puts Dysart in a precarious position, because the shoreline closure restriction with the Municipal Act.

"Now you're asking us to defy our law," said Fearrey.

Belcher said the ministry has the right to object to shoreline closures as the adjacent landowner. He also said the matter has been taken too seriously by concerned property owners.

"They still have the rights and use and enjoyment of their property. It'll blow over soon. They should just enjoy their cottage."

"It's pretty hard to enjoy your cottage with all these regulations," said Councillor Dorothy Baker.

Planning Administrator asked how the municipality can protect the shoreline by refusing to sell it to property owners. "If there is no bylaw, then there's no difference as to who owns it."

"Well, the municipality can say, 'It's our property, we don't want any trees taken off'," said Flemming.

If the ministry is concerned about fisheries, it should deal with water levels, said Fearrey. "That's the real problem."

"If fish spawn in two feet of water, and it stays wet, it's okay," said Flemming.

Reeve Bill Davis said the water levels dropped severely at Redstone Lake two years ago, by nine or 12 feet. "You can't tell me that doesn't hurt fisheries."

"If lakes go down before spawning, it allows waves to clean off algae from the shoal," said Flemming. "As long as it doesn't dry off after spawning, and those eggs will stay there, those eggs will hatch."

Tourism withers under tax load

An article in the Financial Post describes the recent Tourism Ontario report that was prepared by its president, Roly Michener and the Conference Board of Canada. It is damning indictment that "accuses governments of taxing far beyond their means. This combined with government ineptitude is driving the tourism industry out of business."

"Hundreds of tourism and hospitality businesses have been brought to their knees by tremendous increases in municipal, business and payroll taxes, statutory wages and benefits and compliance with legislation and regulations since 1985."

The looming minimum wage of $7.50 per hour is one current example of a sword hanging over our own local service industry that to survive must use student, part-time and seasonal workers.

The report also notes "Canada has the highest personal income taxes in the 22 National Organization of Economic Co-operation and Development, that federal sales taxes have increased 50% in the past five years. In Ontario, provincial taxes have increased 123.6% in the same period yet incredibly the deficit still has grown by 48% to 44.1 billion." It also "blames high provincial and federal tax rates for the surge in cross border shopping as well as the increase in the number of Ontarians vacationing out of province."

Chamber News

by Shawn Hagerman

In talking with resort owners, an example of this ineptitude and waste becomes painfully clear. In mid-June a Purolator van arrived at a local resort delivering an unsolicited large brown prepaid carton from the Ontario Ministry of Tourism. Inside was discovered a 50-page manual, a videotape, a mechanical lead pencil, an expensive "Lufkin" tape measure and a form letter from the Minister of Tourism, Peter North, asking if he has considered making his resort wheelchair accessible for the physically disabled. The manual and videotape explained the opportunities there are to serve this particular market. This owner is as socially conscientious as anyone I know and expressed a wish to me that if he could afford it he would be glad to make his resort more accessible. However, I could feel his frustration of having to deal with a government bureaucracy gone madly out of control.

The difficult and critical tourist season was just weeks away, yet this business was burdened with taxes few if any other industry has to bear. What in the world could be done in two weeks with a lead pencil and tape measure to attract a new market segment? It is an insult to anyone's intelligence and sensibilities to squander so much money on rulers and pencils in these times. His estimated cost to the taxpayer for the package including Purolator charges, VCR tape, etc. and the time to wrap and ship it must have been a minimum of $50. Multiply this by how many hundred or thousands of resorts and it is no wonder we have a record deficit. Maybe the answer simply lies in reducing the taxes on a beleaguered industry so that the physically disabled could afford the holiday in the first place. Then with numbers of people making reservations well ahead of time for an upcoming season it would then be reasonable to hire a contractor, (he would have his own pencil and ruler and would now be too busy to read manuals or look at government videos and make the resort more accessible).

It seems too simple and too easy. Instead, the government will probably have to spend $75,000 to hire a consultant and study the issue first. Oh well!

Dorset acid rain report

The following report on precipitation events was recorded at the Ministry of Environment acid rain testing station in Dorset and compiled by Environment Canada.

This report covers the period of June 30 to July 6.

July 4, 5 mm rain, pH 4.1, from eastern Lake Erie, western Pennsylvania and eastern Ohio.

July 5, 1 mm rain, pH 4.0, from southern Ontario, southern Michigan and northern Indiana.

Environmental damage is usually observed in sensitive areas regularly receiving precipitation with pH less than 4.7. Readings of 4.0 pH or less are considered dangerous. The lower the reading, the more acidic the precipitation.

Health card now required

As of July 1 of this year, the new Health Card for medical coverage came into effect throughout the province. Every person in Ontario should have a new Health Card, with their own individual number. These replace the old OHIP numbers and unlike the old system, where one number served the whole family, now each person must have their own number and card.

Unfortunately, there

With Dennis Drainville, MPP

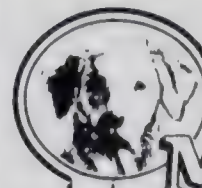

are hundreds of people who have not yet filed for one or have not yet received one. If you have not yet filed, the forms are available from any doctors office or hospital. I urge you to order your card now. There is no fee and the new cards are now necessary. If you have filed and have not yet received a card, please be patient, there are some delays. There is now a toll free number in place for those who need assistance in applying, 1-800-268-1154.

If you don't have a card and require medical services, don't worry, doctors and hospitals will continue to offer treatment. They have been notified by the Ministry of Health that they will be paid for all expenses incurred by people who do not yet have a Health Card but qualify. A hospital or doctor cannot ask for payment from a patient. If you are experiencing problems with receiving treatment, or if you are asked to pay for treatment, please contact the Health Insurance Division at 613-548-6800.

Another important document that every citizen should have is a birth certificate. It is needed to obtain a social insurance number, passport, pension, or for travel and proof of age. If (more on page 38)

Kids' Korner

by Jean Lacey

Hi Kids!

Here is another puzzle for you with a word list. Look in the diagram of letters for the words given in the list. Find them by reading up, down, forward, backward and diagonally. They are all in a straight line and do not skip letters. Circle the words in the diagram and cross it off the list.

It's as easy as that.

Have fun!

Pause Day committee

gency as the card may take a few weeks to arrive. Information on ordering birth certificates is available through my office. Check to make sure that every member of the family has a correct birth certificate before there is an emergency need for one.

On June 4, the government introduced Common Pause Day Legislation to deal with the contentious and long standing issue of Sunday Shopping. We support a common pause day because we believe it strengthens family and community life. This legislation should be in place by next summer. Until then, the old law is still in force.

The new legislation, (The Retail Business Establishments Statute Law Amendment act), reaffirms our commitment to the common pause day, and improves protection for the rights of retail workers, one of the most underprotected groups in the workforce. For instance, no employee can be forced to work on a Sunday or holiday.

The act also provides province-wide criteria under which tourism-based areas and businesses will be able to apply to open Sundays and holidays. We do realize the importance of tourism-based business needs to be recognized as it is part of a $14 billion dollar industry. It is certainly one of the most vital economic forces in Victoria and Haliburton Counties and I consider it an important part of my job to work for its protection and enhancement.

Under the new legislation, Haliburton and much of Victoria County have the natural attractions and hospitality services to qualify for a tourist exemption to open on Sundays. Once a tourism exemption is granted then small retail-tourist based business within that municipality may apply to open on Sundays. Only the larger retail businesses (operating with more than 7500 square feet or with eight or more employees), will have to prove to the municipality that they are tourist based. Businesses such as real estate offices are NOT affected by the common pause day legislation.

My office is ready and willing to assist any Chamber of Commerce, tourist board or municipality to apply for the necessary exemption if they wish to allow Sunday shopping in their community. When the new legislation is in place, we will strike a balance and address the need of business, workers, families and the community.

We will be holding public hearings throughout the province on the Common Pause Day legislation and welcome input from Chambers of Commerce, municipalities and individuals. The all-party committee will be in Peterborough on August 14.

TSW report

Rains of 8 to 12 mm were most welcome over much of the watersheds of the Trent River and Severn River the night of July 4/5. Flows of the Gull River and others which had been reduced Wednesday, July 3, were further reduced on Friday, July 5, to conserve reservoir lake water. Many stoplogs have been re-inserted in Haliburton dams to slow down this flow.

On Tuesday, July 2, the reservoirs were at 82.6 per cent. This was below the 10-year average of 87 per cent for that date, but higher than in 1988 at 79 per cent or 1987 at 76.7 per cent. Hot, dry summers result in increased evaporation from Haliburton area lakes as well as the Kawartha lakes of the Trent-Severn Waterway and a more rapid decline of the stored water. A normal decline of about 3 1/2 per week can be as rapid as 6 per cent or so during these very dry conditions.

Heard last night that our population has now risen to 26.9 million, but it's too bad that so many are unemployed and that students are having difficulty finding jobs.

Here's a lovely "tribute" poem written by Florence Robinson, entitled:

"Our Homemakers"
As through this weary world we roam,
We're lucky if we have a home.

But as the years keep passing by,
We find that we are not too spry.

Then our homemakers come to help us out,
And I think that is what love is about.

They start to seem like one of us,
And of course, they never make a fuss.

So thanks to those, our faithful friends,
And I pray this service never ends

And our regular correspondent Yvonne Guida has written this poem:

"Refugees"
Who's beautiful brown eyes stare
At devastation everywhere.

Their homes are gone - their future dim

Will they beseech and receive from Him

The hope that only He can give.

They want to believe in something

At this time they begin to wonder

"Oh God, why have you forsaken me?"

And one begins to think, where has God gone?

No one knows.

Only the homeless can look to the skies

For deliverance, food and shelter

And to know that they are loved.

CARD OF THANKS

Once again with excellent and prompt care Les Northey has recovered from a serious infection. We wish to thank ambulance drivers, nurses Sarla and Gwen, Dr. Dawson who accompanied Les to Toronto
General, also the Liver Transportation Team of Dr. Greig and Dr. Levy. Everyone was great and God Bless You All.
The Northey Family

CARD OF THANKS

The family of the late George Bunn wish to thank all who brought food and sent cards of sympathy. We wish to thank those who gave memorial donations and floral tributes.
A special thank you to Gord,
for his kind words and thoughtfulness, to Donna, and Kirsten of the Gordon A. Monk Funeral Home for all their help.
Thank you to the ladies of the Minden Women's Institute for the lunch. Everything you have done is truly appreciated.

Marnie, Wally & family

A special "Thank You" to the Minden Firefighters, who worked so very hard and long to control the fire at our farm house. Your efforts will always be appreciated. Thanks again Guys. To everyone who helped in anyway, Thank You.

Joan & Wally

The Scarecrow Committee of the Minden & District Hor-ticaltural Society is very pleased with the results of the

IN MEMORIAM

MISCIO, BERNICE &
ALFRED. Bernice, July 16,
1989; Alfred, September 2,
1989. In loving memory of Dad and Mom.

God broke all our hearts to prove to us
He only takes the best.
And the best parents he did
take from us
Just two years ago since that sad day

IN MEMORIAM

When the ones we loved were taken away;
God took them home, it was his will
But in our hearts they will always be.

They were always there to guide you along
They were always there when you needed them
You could talk to them about anything

What we would give if we could say,
Hello Dad and Mom in the same old way;

To hear your voices, see your smiles,
To sit with you and chat awhile.
Nothing can be more precious
Than the memories we have of you both

To us you were so special
God must have thought so too
Your last parting wishes
We would like to have heard,
And whispered in your ears
We Love and will miss you
both

More than words can ever say
Our last parting words Dad
and Mom

Wherever your spirits have taken you,
We wish you both peace and happiness together

And when old times we do recall, it's then we miss you most of all

In each one of us there is part of you both

That no one can ever take from us
We will Love and Miss you
both.

Always in our hearts, Mike,
Waneita, Tereasa, June, Tony,
Dona and spouses and grandchildren.

GARTSHORE: Don. Lost to us July 20th, 1978.

Always a silent heartache
And many a silent tear
But always a beautiful memory
Of a son and brother we loved so dear.
His memory is our keepsake
With which we will never part Though God has him in his keeping
We still have him in our hearts.

Deeply missed and loved by all, Mom, Vern, Marlin, Craig, Marg, Jason, Gary, Pat, Chris,
Gary Jr. and Sean.
